Introduction to the College

So you have decided to come to college! After months of waiting and anxious expectations, the time has finally arrived. You may be bewildered now by your new surroundings, but soon you will become a real part of the East Carolina way of life.

East Carolina College is a great place and you may be spending the best years of your life here. The most important thing is to obtain the education for which you are striving. That does not include just knowledge gained by attending classes or passing exams. No! Education is broader than that. "Book 'larnin'" isn't all there is at East Carolina College. There is much more to college than classes.

It is here you will learn to get along with people, where you will make lasting friendships, where you will learn to use your time and money to the best advantages, where many of you will have your first taste of independence and responsibility, where—well, we could go on and on, but you get the idea.

The important thing you will discover in the coming years is that there is more to the College than could ever be put into a mere handbook. The real meaning of East Carolina College is more intangible, more personal; East Carolina will take on its own special meaning to you just as it has for those who came before you and for those who will come after you.

This will be a gala year on the East Carolina campus. And, a dream of yours is coming true. You will be a part of the College's many activities.

The activities and facilities of the College are yours for the taking. Use them to your best advantage and find your way to a much happier four years at East Carolina.

Your Part at the College

Many new students, on their arrival at college, feel awed by their new surroundings and lost in the mass of students. You may wonder, "What is my part at East Carolina?" To you, we give this answer, "You are not just a part of East Carolina. You are East Carolina."

What you do here will affect the future of the College as well as your own. You will play a major part in keeping college facilities functioning properly through your support and participation in its varied program, and your scholastic success will determine the degree of prestige enjoyed by the College.

As a student and, later, as a graduate, you will be representing East Carolina College wherever you go. Your conduct will determine the reputation of the College. Potential students will look to you as an example of the student body of East Carolina. If you give to the College a good reputation among the colleges of the South and the nation, it will insure the College's continued success and assure you a definite position in the community as a graduate of East Carolina College.

Introduction to the Community

The town of Greenville, which boasts a wealth of history dating back to 1786, is situated on the Tar River in the heart of Pitt County. Named in honor of General Nathaniel Greene, Revolutionary War hero of the Battle of Guilford Courthouse, the little town was established on land totaling one hundred acres, donated by Richard Evans.

Early in the life of Greenville, the citizens of the community indicated their interest in education; and in 1814, the Greenville Academy was incorporated, followed by the organization of the Greenville Female Academy in 1830.

The intriguing and beautiful Tar River is typical of the surrounding area and its history.

A popular meeting place for the local College set is Five Points, in the heart of downtown Greenville.

Thus began the institutions of learning as the forerunners of the modern and accredited school system in Greenville. The Chamber of Commerce has cited Greenville for its "distinction of having the facilities to care for the educational needs of its youth from kindergarten to a master's degree from college, which is an important factor in the city's growth."

Greenville is a growing community of more than 25,000 persons residing within a radius of three miles of the College campus. In an area where agriculture is balanced with industry, Greenville continues to show its pride as being "Eastern North Carolina's Center of Culture." Since its founding it has been a progressive center for educational, trading, and marketing activities. Today, it is a trading center with a high volume of wholesale and retail sales. The town is predominantly agricultural in its basic economic life and is the center of the world's greatest tobacco-producing county. It has eight plants processing tobacco and supplying the trade, both domestic and foreign. There is expansion and diversity in the industrial community.

Main Street is Evans Street with prominent side streets meeting at well-known Five Points. These avenues are the sites of many shopping excursions. Whether the need be for a new suit or dress or just a glance at the latest magazine, it can be found on or near Five Points. For a town of its size, Greenville is surprisingly complete in the goods and services it affords the College student body and townspeople. Above and beyond the staple necessities, there are numerous unique features which make the town the much-loved and much-visited place it is.

A year-round program of recreation is provided by trained personnel; the city has three parks and eight playgrounds. The Greenville Country Club boasts a swimming pool and an eighteen-hole golf course. There are motion picture theatres in the business district and drive-in theatres adjacent to the suburbs. For the athletically-inclined, there is a horseback riding stable, in addition to the ever-popular miniature golf, trampoline, and modern bowling facilities.

For the gourmet—and who isn't?—there are numerous happy hunting grounds. Whether it is pizza or charcoaled steaks, Greenville offers some of the best. Even the lazy scholar has been considered, for many of the local establishments feature carry-out and delivery service.

To the college student as well as the local townspeople, Greenville has much to offer. And, as suggested by its slogan, Our Greenville, Yours If You Come, the citizens of Greenville are famous for their hospitality to the College community.

History of the College

Greenville born and bred, the influence of East Carolina College now interweaves the entire coastal sweep of Eastern North Carolina, threads across the State into all other sections, and is slowly inching its way across the nation.

East Carolina was born in the State's first great educational upsurge which was initiated around the turn of the century by Governor Charles Brantley Aycock, North Carolina's great "educational governor." Chartered March 8, 1907, the school was a two-year normal institution designed to meet the need for teachers in a State striving for enlightenment. It was named East Carolina Teachers Training School. Ground was broken for the first buildings on July 2, 1908, by Governor Thomas J. Jarvis.

With one hundred seventy-four students enrolled for the regular session and three hundred thirty for the summer session, the newly-established College opened its door for the first time on October 5, 1909. At this time only one-year and two-year curricula were offered. Two years later, June 6, 1911, the first class was graduated from the two-year normal curriculum.

East Carolina's first president, Dr. Robert H. Wright, was a man of great energy and high ideals and an educator of unusual foresight and courage. From 1909 until 1934, he guided the development of the college and, with his staff, worked tirelessly to assure the training of better teachers for public schools.

On November 20, 1920, the College was authorized to offer a four-year curriculum and to grant the Bachelor of Arts Degree, the first two of which were conferred in August, 1922. Authorization for the granting of the Master of Arts Degree came on August 22, 1929, and the first of these degrees was conferred in August, 1933. On May 29, 1949, the College instituted a curriculum leading to the Bachelor of Science degree.

During the early years, East Carolina grew slowly and sedately, as North Carolina was growing in those years. In 1920, it became a four year college granting a Bachelor of Arts degree and, in 1921, acquired its new name, East Carolina Teachers College. The College became an accredited institution during this time and won for itself a position of prestige both in and out of the State.

A growing tradition and a favorite meeting place, this bell was erected in honor of those students who served in the armed forces during World War II.

After World War II, East Carolina Teachers College was besieged by boys and girls who wanted a college education. This tidal wave increased as children who were a part of the war's rising birth rate began to enter the public schools and head for college. East Carolina expanded its Department of Education to meet the ever-increasing need for teachers. Today, more than half its graduates annually become members of North Carolina's public school faculties. Enrollment has constantly increased with six thousand students expected this fall.

As the enrollment of East Carolina increased, so did the physical size of the campus. To date, the College Trustees have brought the total area of the campus to two hundred and thirty-five acres. In contrast to the six buildings ready for use by the first students, there are now some thirty buildings on the campus. New additions include a stadium honoring Greenville's late citizen, James S. Ficklen, a dormitory for five hundred and twenty men, and an annex to Flanagan Classroom Building, which will permit expansion of the Science and Industrial Arts departments. Now in the planning stages is a new women's dormitory which, with the approval of the Advisory Budget Commission, will be constructed with federal funds.

As the number of students and the size of the plant grew, better training for young men and women developed. There are now sixteen departments, all of which prepare teachers for work in the public schools. In addition, a group of pre-professional courses enables students to take from one to three years of study preparatory to entering colleges giving full curricula in specialized fields. A unit of the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps offers military training for young men.

In 1947, East Carolina's Bureau of Field Services, now the Division of Extension, began its work. Extension courses taught by members of the College faculty were offered in 1961-1962 in thirty-seven centers in the eastern part of the State. Adult education classes have also been offered by various departments of instruction. In June, 1961, a branch college was established at Camp Lejeune. Special education has in recent years received increased emphasis, and a number of North Carolina's most successful teachers in this field received their training at East Carolina. The College has expanded its services to its students through a Testing Bureau and through a guidance and counseling program in which all members of the faculty participate. It has aided teachers, administrators, and others by staging each year a series of workshops, conferences, and clinics dealing with major problems of education.

A cry that rose in pitch and timbre during the '50's called for more music, more art, more drama, more of the humanities—in short, more of the adjuncts for the educated man and woman. College officials responded by adding to the curriculum additional courses in these subjects and arranging for the presentation of more dramas, concerts, recitals, and literary programs.

As the curriculum has expanded, the College has kept in the vanguard of progress by using new methods and techniques in education. In the fall of 1954, East Carolina pioneered in the field of educational television by presenting what is said to be the first television course offered for credit in the entire South. Radio programs have been broadcast from various stations for several years. A weekly television program "Let's Go To Jarvis Hall, one of the original buildings, is still used as a coed dormitory.

College" is broadcast over the Greenville Channel, WNCT.

In 1951, the General Assembly recognized the burgeoning College by changing its name to East Carolina College. Originally a training school for teachers and still primarily a teacher-training institution, it is now recognized as one of North Carolina's major liberal arts colleges.

The year 1962 saw the dedication of Umstead Hall, dormitory for women students, honoring the late Governor William B. Umstead, and the Whichard Music Hall, named for David J. Whichard, publisher of The Daily Reflector, the Greenville daily newspaper. Ground breaking ceremonies, using the same spade used by Governor Thomas J. Jarvis in breaking ground for the first campus building in 1908, were held May 3, 1962, at the site of the James S. Ficklen Memorial Stadium.

The establishment of an official college seal was a notable event in the Spring of 1962. The seal, drawn by members of the SGA Ring Committee, was approved for adoption by the East Carolina College Board of Trustees. The need for such a seal was evident in order to establish a concrete symbol emphasizing the college motto, "Servire." This seal has been incorporated into the new college ring, also designed by the Ring Committee.

In many ways, the presence of a great institution of learning means an increase in both educational and cultural advantages of the people. This is what East Carolina College means to Greenville, to Eastern North Carolina, and to the entire state of North Carolina.

New East Carolina rings made their debut in 1962.

Facilities and Services

CAFETERIAS

Food-wise, East Carolina operates on the cafeteria system, with four cafeterias now in operation. Three such dining halls are located in the center of campus in a building also housing the post office, book store, new soda shop, and the Buccaneer Room. The fourth is located in the basement of Jones Hall on College Hill Drive. An addition to the latter is now in process. The state-owned cafeterias provide many students with part-time employment.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

The Alumni Association of East Carolina College was organized on June 5, 1912, by the Classes of 1911 and 1912, with its purpose "to develop a spirit of co-operation among its members, to increase a spirit of loyalty to its Alma Mater, and to promote the general welfare of the institution." The objectives of the Alumni Association are to keep Alumni informed about College activities, to encourage alumni to represent the College in their communities, and to persuade each alumnus to make an annual contribution to the College. The Alumni Office maintains an alphabetical file of all graduates, a class file, and an geographical file. It publishes a monthly news bulletin and a quarterly magazine. Alumni Affairs of the College and the Alumni Association are administered by Janice G. Hardison, Alumni Secretary.

STUDENT FUND ACCOUNTING OFFICE

Located next door to the Student Government Association office in Wright Building, the Student Fund Accounting Office maintains records of all receipts and disbursements for each of the organizations supported by the Student Activity Fee. Purchase orders are issued by the SFAO only after requisitions have been signed, approved, and submitted to the office. Bills incurred officially by the participating organization are paid by the SFAO and copies of such are sent to the organization so that adequate records may be kept for auditing purposes. This also prevents spending more than the organization has been appropriated. Mrs. Doris Henderson, Accountant, is head of SFAO. Mr. Alton Finch serves as faculty advisor. Office hours are from 1:00 P.M. to 4:30 P.M.

MRS. SCARLETT MILLER
Assistant to the Director

COLLEGE UNION

Serving as the hearthstone of East Carolina College student life, the College Union offers a variety of activities planned to encourage social responsibility and leadership in our democracy. Founded on democratic principles—"Of, for and, by the Students"—every student enrolled in the College is automatically a member and is invited to join one of the numerous committees organized to plan recreational activities for the students. The CU is more than an avenue to the Soda Shop, or a place for the male population to check the "cheesecake."

An appeal to a variety of recreational preferences, both active and passive, is made. The College Union provides television, bridge, table tennis, and dancing as every-day activities. The Union sponsors tournaments in many fields, and, in addition, honors such groups as the foreign students on campus. Editing a monthly calendar of events and maintaining an up-to-date bulletin board are but two of its many services to the student body. Others include serving as an information center, a checking station, a lost and found headquarters, and a general gathering center.

LOST AND FOUND

Each year many students lose jewelry, clothing, books, and other items and never recover them because they do not follow the simple steps necessary to do so. A lost and found department is sponsored by the College Union. Inquire at the CU office in Wright Building. A few simple precautions will help you regain your lost possessions. You can cooperate with this program by taking all the articles you find to the lost and found department.

FINANCIAL AID

Many students just entering the College and some of those already enrolled are unable to meet all the necessary expenses for attending East Carolina. Therefore, it is part of the work of the Student Affairs office, under Dr. James H. Tucker, to assist these people in securing their education. Self-help work assignments and scholarships are available through this office. Most part-time jobs require about three hours per day. Various scholarships are available to those who show high academic attainment and a definite need for the assistance. Loan funds have been provided for students of good academic standing and with need for assistance with their necessary expenses.

HOUSING

There are several alternatives available to the student attending East Carolina College in the way of housing. Some live off-campus in private homes. Others commute to and from school daily. A few live in fraternity or sorority houses. The majority reside in one of the twelve College dormitories.

STUDENT BANK

For the convenience of ECC students, a bank is maintained in the basement of Austin Building. Under the auspices of the Student Government Association, the Student Bank cashes checks and opens accounts for those students who wish to use its services. The bank is not open to the public.

INFIRMARY

For the usual variety of minor ills that will prevail at East Carolina, proper medical care is available through the College Infirmary. Under the immediate supervision of Dr. C. F. Irons, the Infirmary is staffed with three physicians and four registered nurses. There is no charge, with the exception of meals, for the services rendered to the students. Except in emergencies, medical care must be secured from the Infirmary during regular clinic hours when the doctors are in attendance. Refer to the section on special assistance for these clinic hours.

PLACEMENT BUREAU

All graduates of East Carolina are eligible for the services rendered by the College Placement Bureau. Students are urged to register for these free services. Persons who have records in the active file of the Bureau are recommended to prospective employers and notified of various vacancies. Upon request by a prospective employer, a student's confidential brochure is sent to the employer by the Placement Bureau. Those registered are scheduled for interviews when recruiters are on campus. Mr. G. Allan Nelms is Director of the Bureau.

JOYNER LIBRARY

Located in the center of the campus, convenient to all students, the Joyner Library houses more than 200,000 volumes and continually adds to its collection. Nineteen persons compose the regular staff for the library facilities. In addition, forty student assistants work in self-help positions. The modern library, completed in 1955, provides numerous special services for the East Carolina College students. Approximately 750 periodicals are subscribed to for the convenience of the student body. Reading rooms, a periodical room, the North Carolina Reference Room, and an air conditioned auditorium are among the facilities of the J. Y. Joyner Library. Wendell W. Smiley is the librarian in charge.

MAIL FACILITIES

Students may rest assured that the campus is not isolated. Mail facilities at the College are often times better than the ones "back home." Male students on-campus are serviced in the dormitories. Mail is picked up and delivered to them daily. Coeds residing in dormitories and off-campus students, at their option, use the facilities of the College Post Office. Boxes are rented to them at nominal fees. Mail is delivered at 8:00 A.M. and 4:00 P.M. and picked up at 8:00 A.M., 4:00 P.M., and 5:20 P.M.

CAMPUS POLICE

East Carolina maintains a full-time law enforcement force of four, supervised by Chief Johnnie Harrell. These men, friends of the student body, preserve law and order, promote safety, and provide protection. The Campus Police office is located in the basement of Fleming Hall.

NEWS BUREAU

The College News Bureau has as one of its major purposes giving recognition to individual students and to student organizations through publicity about their worthwhile achievements and about those activities which are of public interest. News releases are sent daily to newspapers, radio and television stations, and to other publications. The staff of the News Bureau is particularly interested in letting "the folks back home" know what their students are doing at College. Miss Mary H. Greene is Director. Miss Sarah Kirkpatrick is Assistant Director.

IBM FACILITIES

IBM facilities at East Carolina have undergone extensive testing by Mr. Charles Rhodes, the Data Processing Manager for the College, and are now ready for actual application. The equipment will be used for pre-registration, drop-add procedures, tabulating individual grade summaries, alphabetizing and indexing for College publications, and more to be added after the present operations are running at optimum efficiency. This electronic data processing method is not only a transition from manual labor to machine labor, but will simplify previous procedures used by the College.

LAUNDRY

An additional service to the local students is a College-owned and operated laundry. The facility features pick-up and delivery service to each dormitory. A routine schedule is posted and followed for each respective dorm. Mr. W. E. Boswell is supervisor of the laundry which operates with some thirty-five employees. Additional space is now being provided for the College facility. When new accommodations are completed, the laundry will feature a drive-in service for depositing and picking up bundles.

STUDENT DIRECTORY

An annual student directory is compiled, printed, and sold by the College Union as a service to the students. This directory furnishes such essential information as local address, home address, classification, and marital status of each student. When completed, these directories will be on sale in the College Union.

STUDENT SUPPLY STORES

Student Supply Stores at East Carolina College include a book store, a stationery store, and two soda shops. Under the supervision of Mr. Harry Rainey, the stores operate for the convenience of the College students. The book store, located under the South Cafeteria, is a place where students can either buy or sell textbooks and miscellaneous supplies. As well as selling new books, the book store has used texts available at savings to the students. The stationery store offers anything from decals to sweatshirts and is located on the basement floor of Wright Building, adjacent to the main soda shop. The second, or new, soda shop is located under the South Cafeteria, next to the book store.

ENTERTAINMENT SERIES

Student Government Association-sponsored, the Entertainment Series is under a committee which endeavors to select programs which will be varied in appeal, and which will, at the same time, be a credit to the sponsor of the series. Selections agreed upon by the committee and the funds necessary to secure the contracts are subject to the approval of the SGA Student Senate. Many notables, as a result, visit the campus and entertain the student body. The schedule for 1962-1963 appears below.

October 8	William Warfield, Baritone
October 19	Sarah Vaughn, Popular Vocalist
November 15	The Limelighters, Folk Singers
January 9	Alexander Brailowsky, Pianist
January 24	Dave Brubeck, Jazz Quartet
February 18	Jose Limon, Interpretive Dance Group
March 12	Judith Anderson, Actress and Company
April 24	Four Preps, Male Quartet
May 9	North Carolina Symphony

LECTURE SERIES

In an educational realm, the Student Government Association, in cooperation with Sperry and Hutchinson Company, co-sponsors the recently-introduced Lecture Series. Renowned speakers from the United States and abroad visit the campus for lecturing purposes. These lectures occasionally are in the form of debates with subjects ranging from religion to present-day politics.

FREE FLICKS

Throughout the year, Free Flicks are presented periodically on campus. As a part of the Student Government Association Entertainment Series, recent movies as well as a few "oldies" are brought to campus movie screens for student enjoyment. Funds for the Free Flicks come from the student activity fees paid quarterly by East Carolina students.

WWWS-AM

WWWS-AM, "the voice of the campus" is East Carolina College's own self-supporting radio station. Operating on a frequency of 570 kilocycles, the campus radio station broadcasts numerous programs. These programs include popular music, Broadway hits, light classics, sports, and news. Remote broadcasts can originate from any building on campus, and a special remote feature is the nightly "Dance Party" from the College Union. Located on the second floor of Joyner Library, this station is strictly collegiate for the benefit of the local students.

WWWS-FM

With a program format which consists of classical music, Broadway hits, and jazz, WWWS-FM serves the College as a publicity and public relations agent. In addition, its services include broadcasts from British and French Broadcasting Companies. Broadcasting seven hours daily, five days each week, the studios are located on the third floor of Austin Building with offices on the second floor of Joyner Library. The station is College-owned and operated by students as an extra-curricular activity.

WWWS-TV

For the students interested in television work, East Carolina College offers the services of campus television. These closed circuit facilities produce many educational courses through the popular Channel 2. Several subjects, including art, business, music, psychology, and health courses are taught through this medium. Other programs including newscasts and dramatic programs are also shown. A frequent service to the students is the broadcast of the weekly Student Senate meetings held in Joyner Library Auditorium. The Television Guild, a professional club, is the organization coordinating the activities of campus television.

The College Seal

The official seal of East Carolina is shaped as a six-cornered shield encased in a circular border containing the name, location, and founding date of the College. The shield portion of the seal represents the shape of the "Shield of Trust," as was used in the Crusades. The six corners of the shield can represent the eventual six major degrees. This shield portion is divided into four designs with the motto, "Servire," meaning "To Serve," emblazoned on the scroll. The blazing torch and the open "Book of Knowledge," on which the former reflects light, denote not only the symbols of education, but the service rendered to the students by the College. The ink pot and quill, symbols of the scribes, represents the creative arts and the contributions of the students to the world of business. The crusty pirate not only acts as the school mascot, but serves as a reminder that through athletics, students build strong bodies for keen minds, and learn the lesson of fair play and ability to compete. East Carolina is no longer a local college. It has a destiny to produce graduates that will serve to the four corners of the world, made smaller by modern transportation. This is expressed as the central motif of the design. A shield within the shield displays the polaris, the guiding star illuminating behind the two half globes that make up our world.

Campus Life

Student artists add color to the campus as they seek to capture nature's beauty on canvas.

Academic Life

Academic success is a pre-requisite for everything at East Carolina. Participation in extra-curriculars, sports, and social events are all contingent upon acceptable scholastic performance. Do not make the mistake, however, of presupposing that education at East Carolina College is an unbearably difficult and intolerably boring experience.

As a student here, you will have boundless opportunities for growth and enrichment—socially, spiritually, and above all, intellectually. You will encounter absorbing classroom discussions, engrossing outside assignments, and stimulating lectures.

Through the recently established Lecture Series and other advancements in local educational facilities, important contributions have been made to the complete academic experience, the core of your life at East Carolina. Distinguished members of the East Carolina faculty now include Francis Speight, noted Tar Heel artist, who is here as an artist in residence, Ovid W. Pierce, prize winning author and member of the English Department, and Dr. Martin Mailman, composer and associate professor in the Music Department. In this atmosphere so vibrant with creativity and intellectual notables, your academic endeavors will become the most meaningful aspect of your college career.

During Orientation Week, you will be notified of your faculty advisor. You will meet this instructor who has been given the job of counseling you and other students during your stay here. It is he who will assist you in planning your class schedules and give the added advice and encouragement whenever it is needed.

A portion of all students' program will be similar, for, in addition to an education in your chosen major field, you will be given a broad and comprehensive background in the sciences, civilization, English, and mathematics. Here once again, your advisor will come in as he guides you within these required basic courses that provide a framework to insure your individual needs.

Convocations or departmental meetings are held periodically in order that you and your advisor may keep in contact. Most advisors have specified office hours. At these times, advisees are free to talk with their advisors. However, you should feel free to make appointments with them for other times, if the necessity should arise.

East Carolina College operates on the quarter system. Fall, Winter, and Spring Quarters compose the regular session of school. In addition, a Summer Quarter is held in order that the College might render every service it can to advance the best interests of public education. The Summer Quarter is equivalent in all respects to any quarter in the college year.

Classes meet hourly for fifty minutes with the number of times per week depending upon the number of quarter hours of the course plus the required labs connected with the course. There are ten minute breaks between all classes. Attendance regulations are determined by the number of quarter hours credit received for an individual course. One cut per quarter is allowed for each quarter hour of credit received for the course. But, no matter how many cuts you are permitted, the best policy is to attend every class. If you are absent, it is a good practice to get class notes from at least two people in order to get a reasonably complete summary of what you missed.

On the first day of classes, each instructor will announce the books and other materials that will be used during the course that quarter. It will not be necessary, therefore, to have these things at the first class meeting. Do not hesitate to ask questions on any point which is not clear. Instructors welcome questions, both to clarify confusing points and as a point of departure for class discussion.

At various times throughout your courses, you will have quizzes which may or may not be announced. Mid-term exams may or may not be given, according to the policies of the professor. At the end of each quarter, a final examination is given for each course. These final exams usually are administered over a three-day period with two hours allowed for each.

Professors seem to agree that each course taken requires at least two hours of preparation outside class for every hour spent in class. Proportion your time so as to allow at least this much for each of your courses. A written, diagrammed study schedule is often a good idea. On occasion, these are furnished by your instructors.

To educate the maximum, television courses are frequently offered. These courses prove to be as rewarding in knowledge gained as any other. Just as in any course you undertake, what you get out of it is entirely up to you.

Above all, stay mentally and physically alert. You are not learning when you are fighting to stay awake. Avoid cramming by reviewing the material regularly. Having a specific plan and time for study makes for better concentration and assimilation. The campus abounds with quiet study nooks. Classroom buildings, the library, and convenient facilities in dormitory rooms provide adequate places for study halls.

The importance of a good beginning cannot be over-emphasized. Your standing at the College will be measured by your quality point average. This system awards three quality points per hour for an A, two quality points for a B, one for a C, and none for a D or F, the latter of which is failing. Your quality point average is determined by dividing the total number of points earned by the total number of hours taken.

As a freshman, you are required to earn five hours credit your first quarter of attendance and not less than six hours during the second and third quarters. At the end of your freshman year, you must have earned a minimum of thirty hours and at least two-thirds as many quality points as you have hours. After the third quarter, a minimum of nine hours must be earned per quarter. You must pass at least thirty-five hours during your second year, and at the end of six quarters must have credit for not less than sixty-five hours, and as many quality points as hours. As a third or fourth year student, you must pass a minimum of forty hours for each of the two years, and must have as many quality points as hours. A 1.0 (C) average is required for graduation.

East Carolina now grants the Bachelor of Science degree to those who wish to teach and those who wish to enter nursing. It also grants a Bachelor of Music degree, a Bachelor of Arts degree, and a Master of Arts degree in a variety of subjects, including a Master of Arts degree in Education. The College is, of course, fully accredited by all the proper state, regional, and national agencies and commissions.

Learning at East Carolina is not confined to the College campus. At Camp Lejeune, the school maintains a branch college which has the largest enrollment of marines in the world. Extension courses are also offered wherever and whenever there are enough individuals to make them self-sustaining. Extension work is offered through the Bureau of Field Services and includes travel-study tours in Europe and regional study tours in this country and Canada.

Important additions to the curriculum—in response to the need of Tar Heel boys and girls—are two year courses in forestry, agriculture and wood, pulp, and paper technology, and a one year course in engineering. Pre-professional courses in dentistry, law, medicine, optometry, and pharmacy also are available.

The Department of Business Education has grown into the School of Business with well over one thousand students participating. In 1960, a School of Nursing was created in answer to the need for more trained nurses. Enrollment during the past fall, included seventy-one coeds. The Department of Air Science and its Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps play a prominent part in campus life. Many new students enter the service through the program of this department.

Remember, education is not something that any one does for you or something that happens to you if you wait patiently for it to take effect. It demands initiative, persistence, and a tendency to ignore discouragement. No one will force you to do the work and no one will do the work for you. The question of your academic success rests entirely upon your shoulders. Make the most of it!

Not a rarity, for, with college life, midnight and early morning studying go hand in hand.

Social Life

With casualness as its by-word, East Carolina offers a world of occasions for dating and limitless opportunities for meeting people. Blind dates, an old friend, that cute coed or handsome fellow in your English I class, the girl or boy back home or at a neighboring college—all are a part of the busy social whirl so familiar to East Carolina College students. Right from the beginning when Orientation Week brings the men and women students together, the "who do you know" games begin. As the year wears on, you will meet others in classes, in the College Union, on Fifth Street, in the library, and in the numerous activities of college life.

The male students will quickly learn that the nine coed dorms are Cotten, Fleming, Garrett, Jarvis, Ragsdale, Slay, Umstead, Wilson, and Woman's Hall. Likewise, the female students will be inquisitive as they scan the women's regulations to see what rules must be abided by in dating.

Dating on campus is determined to a large extent by the season. With the first kick-off in September, football is "king" and greatly influences the fall dating trends. After the game and throughout the year, between classes, and at nights when studies are finessed, the College Union is a favorite meeting place. Throughout the year, there are movie dates, fraternity parties, numerous concerts and lectures, and even study dates in the library—all opportunities for you to make the most of East Carolina social life.

Coed institutions provide numerous opportunities for social life.

Athletics

The athletic program of the College is arranged to allow the students to participate in various sports at levels of their degree of ability and skill. The program offers opportunities to all students to compete in intercollegiate sports, intramural activities, or just plain spending one afternoon playing table tennis or swimming.

East Carolina participates intercollegiately in seven major sports. Well-known in the area for its fighting and, quite often, victorious Pirates, the College anticipates another great year in the football, basketball, swimming, track, tennis, baseball and golf circles. Football promises excellent chances for a record season as it begins the year with a new head coach and a new stadium underway. Basketball promises no less. After fourteen years of non-losing seasons, ECC scored second in the conference for last year. Though building be the aim of the coach and team for the coming year, the best swimming team in the history of the College is expected. National champion Bob Kingrey will be returning to the team with that same winning style. Though the upcoming track team boasts no senior members, a much stronger team and more broken records are anticipated. Champions last year, the tennis team, with returning star Blarnie Tanner, is after the crown again. National champions in 1961, no less is expected from the Mallory men, in the field of baseball, for 1963. With all the 1962 members returning, the golf team should go even further than the third place it reaped in the 1961 conference tournament.

Looking forward to bigger and better athletic seasons for 1962-1963, East Carolina has withdrawn from the Carolina Conference, is joining the NCAA, and is endeavoring to join the Southern Conference.

Tense moments are not rare in intercollegiate athletics.

CHEERLEADERS

Chosen by a student-faculty committee, the East Carolina Cheerleaders are the students who promote school and team spirit throughout the year. They begin practice immediately after being chosen in the Spring. Actual participation begins with the first football kick-off in September. Serving the College in cheering capacities for 1962-1963 are:

Barbara Rose, Co-Chief	Marsha Whitworth,	Katherine Lanning
Linda Grady	Co-Chief	Linda Minton
Linda Hill	Carole Johnson	Jackie Polk
Cornelia Holt	Linda Killian	Kathie Salle

East Carolina cheerleaders add "that extra touch" to our athletic events.

Campus Activities

ORIENTATION WEEK

Just as you have been preparing to come to East Carolina, so has the College been preparing for your arrival. Orientation Week has been carefully planned to give you a quick view of what ECC has to offer and to give the administration an opportunity to test you and determine what you have to offer. Assemblies are held, at which times you will meet many of the administrative officials and campus leaders and learn of the countless activities available to you as a student. Placement and physical tests, departmental meetings, open house, and other activities tend to orientate you into the East Carolina way of life.

REGISTRATION

No matter how well prepared a student might be by pamphlets or forewarning by experienced students, registration is about the roughest obstacle you will face. Registration, the selection of the classes you will take and the hours that you will take them, is done prior to each quarter of attendance at the College. This hectic three-ring circus is now in the process of being simplified and made less confusing by the use of the newly-added campus facility, the IBM machine.

PAPER PENNY CAMPAIGN

The College is now actively engaged in a "Paper Penny" campaign. The Liggett and Myers Tobacco Company has authorized East Carolina to collect empty packs of its cigarette products. A penny will be given to the College for each. Students, faculty, administration, and interested individuals are saving the packages in order to add to the funds for the new stadium. The campaign ends December 31, 1962.

TALENT SHOWS

East Carolina is a great promoter of student talent, as evidenced by the numerous talent shows held on the campus each year. The largest of these is sponsored by the Circle K Club. The College Union also sponsors several such shows each year. Money is the prize for those judged tops in each show.

HOMEcoming

More than just another conference game, Homecoming is a combination of the Cannes Film Festival, the Pamplona Bull Fights, and a national political convention. Old grads—their hair lines receding and their girths swollen comically—return to soak up the nostalgia of happy campus days. College organizations compete for the best decorated float and sponsor pretty coeds in the Homecoming Queen competition. Bonfire and pep rally, followed by the annual parade, begin the long and exciting weekend of events. The coronation of the queen, followed by a concert in her honor, and the big game—yes, these are the components of Homecoming, East Carolina College style.

RELIGIOUS EMPHASIS WEEK

Under the supervision and sponsorship of the Director of Religious Activities and the Inter-Religious Council, a week-long period of self-evaluation is held during the early part of Fall Quarter. This emphasis on religion and self-evaluation is a campus-wide affair. Notables in the field of religion are guests on the campus during this week and are eager and available for the numerous discussions, lectures, and questions that arise during Religious Emphasis Week.

SORORITY ALL-SING

Greek organizations get together each Winter Quarter to stage an annual sing. Prizes are awarded to the top participants in this musical production sponsored by Alpha Xi Delta Social Sorority. Both fraternities and sororities are invited to display their musical abilities via the Sorority All-Sing.

CHRISTMAS ASSEMBLY

In keeping with the spirit of Christmas, East Carolina College students assemble in Wright Auditorium for a program of seasonal song and inspiration prior to departing for home for the Christmas holidays. Music is provided by various organizations of the Music Department and a farewell message is given by the College President.

APO's annually stage the "biggest social event of the year" for charity purposes.

WHITE BALL

The White Ball, highlight of Winter Quarter, when snow flurries are eagerly anticipated by the college set, is sponsored by the service fraternity, Alpha Phi Omega. The White Ball, as the traditional event is named, is held as a means of raising money for charity. Tickets are sold by APO members; penny-votes are cast for White Ball Queen nominees; dancing to a "name band" is a must; and proceeds are given to the Crippled Children's Fund. This is the activity of the "biggest social event of the year."

RING SALES

Ring Sales are held periodically during the year, at which times ECC students who meet the requirements may purchase a college ring. The SGA Ring Committee and the L. G. Balfour Company which holds the current five-year contract work together in promoting these sales. Any college student of at least Junior status is eligible to purchase a ring. These sales are held in the recreation area of the College Union.

VALENTINE DANCE

February is the month of hearts, flowers and cupids. In keeping with this theme, Phi Beta Lambda of the Future Business Leaders of America sponsors the Valentine Dance each February. The various organizations are eligible and urged to sponsor candidates for Valentine Queen, chosen by popular vote of those attending. Music is provided by a well-known band and good times are had by all those who attend.

MARCHATHON

Seeking to boost the March of Dimes Fund, the Drill Team of the AFROTC annually sponsors and participates in a local Marchathon. At a designated and highly-publicized time, the charitable cadets march around the Courthouse Square in downtown Greenville until the community donations exceed those of the previous year. This is the Marchathon, a march so that others may walk.

MILITARY BALL

WATER SHOW

Each Spring, the Aquanymphs, a coed organization affiliated with the Women's Recreation Association, exhibit skill in water movement in the Water Show. With a colorful and entertaining theme, these young ladies precision swim with such gracefulness, beauty, and enthusiasm, it leaves the spectators "clamoring for more."

SGA MUSICAL

Spring, 1963, will mark the date of the Tenth Annual SGA Musical. With former successes including "Guys and Dolls," "South Pacific," and "Annie Get Your Gun," students and the public are sure to flock to McGinnis for the next of the SGA-sponsored productions. Tryouts for the musical are not limited to anyone; faculty, as well as students, including those not in dramatics or music, are urged to participate.

This chorus line did much to promote the success of "Guys and Dolls," the 1962 SGA Musical.

BUCCANEER QUEEN

Facial beauty reigns supreme in the selection of the Buccaneer Queen. From an array of campus beauties submitted by various organizations, a student-faculty committee selects the top finalists who will vie for the crown. Former judges for the final round have included the Kingston Trio, the Greenville Camera Club, and the student body. This first lady of the yearbook will once more be chosen in the early Fall to reign over the Buccaneer and its activities. Special recognition for the lovely lass chosen is given in the yearbook, at the Buccaneer Banquet, and at Awards Day. The reigning queen is Miss Nancy Lockwood, a junior from Hampton, Virginia.

MILITARY QUEEN

A growing tradition on campus, the AFROTC Military Ball spotlights the crowning of the Military Queen. Selected by popular vote of the Air Force cadets, the queen chosen possesses outstanding qualities of personality and beauty. Miss Laverne Blackley, former Miss Greenville, was crowned at the 1962 Military Ball and will represent the cadets in this capacity until the selection of her successor in the Fall.

SUMMER SCHOOL QUEEN

The highlight of the Summer activities in the Summer School Ball which is in honor of the Summer School Queen. Prior to the Ball, campus organizations nominate members of the fairer sex for the title signifying "Queen of the Sun and Fun Season." Popular vote of the students attending Summer session then names the lucky coed given the crown. Miss Julia Payne wears the crown for 1962.

AZALEA PRINCESS

Annually, the Student Government Association is asked to select a coed to represent the College at the Azalea Festival in Wilmington. Charm, poise, personality, and attractiveness are attributes which this representative must possess. As the 1962 Princess, Miss Cathy Shesso was a member of the Queen Azalea's Court of Honor.

Student Government Association

Student Government Association

TOM MALLISON
SGA President

As the name implies, the Student Government Association at East Carolina College is student government. Every phase of the government is handled by students without intervention by the faculty or administration: students elect their officers and representatives who, in turn, appoint students to other offices.

As in the federal and state governments, the SGA has its three branches: the executive (Executive Council), legislative (Student Senate), and judicial (Men's and Women's Judiciaries). The president of the SGA presides at both the Executive Council and the Student Senate meetings, while the chairmen of the Men's and Women's Judiciaries preside at their respective judicial meetings. The real governing power is vested in the students who elect their representatives in the Spring campus-wide elections.

There is more to East Carolina student government than merely attending weekly Senate meetings and working with other persons on the many committees connected with the governmental problems, as important as these may be. East Carolina students do something. Part of this something is appropriating the annual budget of more than $130,000. Other parts of this something are intangible and can be recognized only in the feeling of service and responsibility to East Carolina and its way of life.

Working in student government is more than making laws and preparing services. Staff members of the Buccaneer, East Carolinian, Rebel, and The Key are actually working for student government, as are those on committees and councils.

Upon the completion of enrollment procedures at East Carolina College, students become integral parts of the SGA. These students become members of an educational community, historically a center of learning and the well-spring of human progress and a nation's hope. However, the cooperation and support of everyone is a necessity if the policies and activities of the SGA are to be carried on successfully. The responsibility of being represented in the vital issues that come before the Student Government Association is one for all.

With continuous changes being made to strengthen the effectiveness of this student representative body, it is evident that the Student Government Association on this campus will never dissolve because it is made up of the entire student body and is a democratic organization run according to the wishes of the majority. There is no student government but that of each individual working for a greater institution.

SGA Committees

BUDGET COMMITTEE

JIM CHESNUTT, Chairman

It is the duty of the Budget Committee, headed by the SGA Treasurer, to make appropriations based upon the amount expected to be derived from the student activity fee, giving due consideration to the distribution of expenditures the previous year. After making these appropriations, the committee must submit the proposed budget to the Student Senate for approval.

ELECTIONS COMMITTEE

WOODY SHEPHERD, Chairman

It is the responsibility of the Elections Committee to conduct the polls in all student body elections, with the exception of those held during the summer term, and to supervise the counting of ballots. It is also charged with the responsibility of publicizing both elections and election returns. In addition, the committee must abide by and enforce the rules set down by the by-laws of that committee.

ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE

BILL MOORE, Chairman

Operating with funds provided by the SGA, the Entertainment Committee brings to campus such notables as Ferrante and Telcher, Count Basie, and the Four Freshmen. This entertainment is planned during the Spring Quarter of each year and comes to the student body, without additional charge, during the coming year. Publicity and ticket sales for this special entertainment are also handled by the committee.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

BILL GOODWIN, Chairman

The responsibility of maintaining contact with other higher institutions of learning, coordinating meetings with student government groups at all levels, and reporting the activities that occur at these meetings are entailed with the duties of the External Affairs Committee. Written reports which include a summary of the meeting, a critical evaluation, suggestions for improvement, and a general statement from each person attending are made and presented to the Senate for permanent files.

IDENTIFICATION CARDS COMMITTEE

BRENDA REGES, Chairman

This committee is charged with the problems of identification for members of the student body. This year, the cards will work on a new system. Rather than the previously-used picture card and activity card combination, there will be one non-picture card printed by the IBM machines. To prevent usage of the card by anyone other than the owner, the SGA office maintains a file of the information corresponding to that on each card.

PRODUCTIONS COMMITTEE

ED SMITH, Chairman

Supervising and directing the annual Student Government Association-sponsored Spring Musical is the principal duty of the Productions Committee. This musical production is open to all students who wish to tryout and usually features both students and faculty. The committee is responsible for publicizing and promoting all phases of the annual affair.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE

PAT WAFF, Chairman

The Publicity Committee strives to publicize the Student Government Association in such a way that each student will be able to become familiar with the functions, actions, and policies of the SGA. This committee is responsible for informing the campus community of all student government activities.

RING COMMITTEE

BILL EYERMAN, Chairman

Composed of the SGA Vice President who serves as chairman, the four class presidents, the Dean of Student Affairs, and the SGA President who serves as an ex officio member, the Ring Committee is responsible for seeing that each and every student receives the opportunity to purchase and the proper service on a college ring. During the Spring of 1962, the present committee designed a new ring, complete with many stylistic changes.

SPECIAL EVENTS COMMITTEE

CATHY SNESSO, Chairman

This standing committee of the Student Government Association is charged primarily with the planning and executing of events for Homecoming Weekend, Awards Day, and the SGA Senate Banquet. Any other special event arising during the year also may be directed to the committee for planning purposes.

Publications Board

As an official organ of the Student Government Association, the Publications Board serves as an advisory and supervising board responsible for counseling in fiscal matters and overseeing the four SGA publications, Buccaneer, East Carolinian, Rebel, and The Key. Through actions of this group, contracts are let, editors are selected, salaries are set, and plans for the publications are approved.

The board is composed of administrative officials, faculty advisors of the publications, student editors and business managers of the publications, and student members-at-large elected by the SGA Senate. Dr. James H. Tucker, Dean of Student Affairs, serves the board as its chairman.

Judiciaries

Two Judiciaries, one for men and one for women, handle the disciplinary problems arising on campus that are referred to the committees by the respective deans. Composed of officers elected in Spring elections, members-at-large elected at the same time, and presidents of each of the dormitories on campus, the Judiciaries have precedence over most discipline matters. All problems of a serious nature come under the Discipline Committee, of which the two Judiciary chairmen are members.

Summer School SGA

Student government activities, just as academic ones, do not cease during the Summer months. A full and varied program, typical of that carried on during the regular term, though on a smaller scale, is conducted during the Summer School sessions. Executive duties are performed by a president, vice president, secretary, and treasurer elected by the students attending Summer School. Legislative duties are performed by the Student Senate, composed of seven, elected members-at-large, the dormitory presidents, and the four executive officers. The College Discipline Committee, composed of both students and faculty members, handle the disciplinary problems arising during the term. The Summer School Student Government Association operates under a similar, but different, constitution in comparison to that of the regular term SGA.

Publications

Publications are an integral part of East Carolina extracurricular activity. Several hundred students are involved in the writing, editing, typing, and planning of these four publications. Many of these students have had no previous experience before and are trained by the staffs of the publications. Conferences which prove to be of value to the staff members are attended by those holding top positions. Paid positions are available to a limited number of those with experience.

BUCCANEER

To the publisher, the Buccaneer is a productive source of income; to the staff members, it is a collection of ideas entailing many ardent hours of labor; and to the students, it is a history of the school year. This is the Buccaneer—a memory book which operates with a budget of approximately $40,000.

In the Spring, the editor for the next edition is selected from qualified students who have made application to the Publications Board for the position. It is then the job of the editor to plan the yearbook and select a staff capable of working with him. The staff membership is open to all interested persons who feel that they qualify for the positions available. Opportunities for advancement are commensurate with the work performed by each individual. As a rule, advanced editorial duties are assigned to staff members with previous experience who exhibit ability to fill the various positions.

Work is actually done on the publication during the Summer, Fall and Winter Quarters. It is during this time that ideas accumulate and are pooled together to form the finished product which is distributed in May.

EAST CAROLINIAN

Since its first appearance on December 19, 1925, the East Carolinian has been the official news organ for the campus. Dedicated to good standards of journalism, the newspaper strives for accurate presentation of the news with its purpose as a communicative organ: to inform, to educate, to stimulate, to make men think, and to be the voice of the students.

Always a student publication, the paper has served the student body as a weekly for twelve years. Winter Quarter, 1961-1962, saw the debut of a twice-weekly, an attempt to maintain high standards of journalistic techniques and to present to the campus a newspaper worthy of being published at East Carolina College.

The East Carolinian is a member of the Associated Collegiate Press and the Carolinas Collegiate Press Association.

REBEL

The creation of the Rebel was an act of confidence by the college at large in certain values held necessarily by only a few students interested in the creative arts. Sponsored by the Student Government Association, this campus literary magazine continues as in previous years with the high standards which have earned it first honor ratings from the Associated Collegiate Press, of which it is a member. Thus, the Rebel enjoys a ranking reputation among other similar publications throughout the South.

Published in three editions, Fall, Winter, and Spring, the magazine displays local talent plus occasional foreign talent. As the local literary magazine, it promises the possibility of publication for students in the areas of the short story, the essay, the poem, the general article, and art. The contributions submitted are judged by the editors and selected on the basis of quality and good taste.

THE KEY

In an attempt to inform incoming students of organizations, policies, and activities of East Carolina College and to serve as a handy reference book, The Key is published and edited by a staff selected during Winter Quarter of each year. Work is begun immediately and completed in the Summer, thus making possible distribution during Orientation Week.

As with the other three College publications, the editor is selected by vote of the Publications Board. A staff is then selected, at his discretion. In an effort to create a quality publication for this year, the staff has been increased and carefully chosen.

For the first time in the history of the handbook, color photography is used to enhance the beauty of and interest in The Key. More photographs, interesting copy, and "a new look" have been added to make it a popular "Frosh Bible" and "Campus Encyclopedia."

Organizations

Organizations

In many ways, you are always a student. Even before and after your formal education, you are in the process of learning. Much of this process involves the practical knowledge of dealing with others. East Carolina, along with its formal training, offers opportunities to you to learn more about dealing with others through student organizations. Each of these clubs, professional, honorary, and service fraternities, religious, fine arts, and military organizations provides something particular to its members. But no matter what the objective of any of these groups, the most important aspect is that of teaching its members to better understand the everyday task of dealing with their fellowmen.

Greeks

Sorority and fraternity bids prompt mixed emotions among those seeking admission into the Greek Life.

Greek Life

Greek sororities and fraternities are an intimate association of students living together, working together and having fun together for the mutual interest of all.

In a man's short lifetime, never is there a better time to develop moral, social and intellectual character than during college. Greek organizations, many feel, have met the challenge by offering to their members good living conditions, congenial surroundings and many facilities for social life.

Though the advantages of Greek life cannot be overlooked, we do not advocate joining one just to be a "fraternity man" or to say "I'm a sorority girl." Greek membership is not essential at East Carolina to be "a part of things." The final decision of whether or not to "go fraternity or sorority" is a personal one, primarily based on one's own experience with and knowledge of the fraternities and sororities on campus.

With this in mind, the Greeks on campus have devised a method of contact for acquainting those interested with fraternity and sorority life. "Rushing," as the term is called, is highly intensified during the first few weeks of each term and consists primarily of informal gatherings so that the Rushee and the Greek organization may get to know one another. Care should be taken not to be swept underfoot by such hospitality. In choosing a group, it is advisable not to discriminate between organizations merely on the basis that acquaintances exist in one and not in another. The caliber of the members should be one of particular concern, for they are potentially one's companions for the remaining years in college.

Rush is held each quarter; so anyone should not feel that he must choose a Greek family the first time he is given an opportunity to pledge; however, as soon as he makes up his mind, he should lose no time in pledging the family of his choice. It is always better to make a wise late choice than to be wrong in an early one.

On the college campus there are eight social sororities and ten social fraternities, all composing East Carolina's Greek Life. For more complete details on these Greek organizations, see the Panhellenic and Inter-Fraternity Council handbooks.

Panhellenic Council

In an effort to acquaint the freshman girls and transfer students with the sorority system on campus, the Panhellenic Council, which is the governing body of the sororities, plans annual convocations. At these meetings, the interested coeds learn about each of the eight social sororities on campus. An open house, complete with sorority displays, is one of the highlights. In the council, each sorority is represented by two members chosen by the individual organization, with the council officers elected on a rotating basis.

Inter-Fraternity Council

Ten social fraternities, eight national and two local, each with three representatives, compose the Inter-Fraternity Council at East Carolina. Rushing, pledging, initiations, and the general welfare of the fraternities are but a few of the orders of business facing the IFC at each meeting. Originated in 1958, this governing council cooperates with the Panhellenic group in co-sponsoring Greek Weekend. For the second consecutive year, the President of IFC is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha.

Regulations

Regulations Governing Both Men and Women Students

Believing that any sound citizenship and democratic way of living is predicated upon honesty, truth, and integrity, all members of the Student Government Association should assume personal responsibility for upholding, to the highest degree, standards necessary to forward respect and honor to the Community, the College, and the State. These principles shall be maintained by the observance of the following standards. The students shall:

1. Refrain from conducting themselves in any way that would bring discredit to the College.
2. Refrain from cheating, stealing, gambling, intentional erring from the truth, and other conduct of a similar seriousness not contributing to good citizenship.
3. Refrain from possession and/or being under the influence of intoxicating beverages while attending the College.

In principle, East Carolina College endorses a single standard of conduct for all students. This in general emphasizes that any man student who is a party to an act involving a woman student's probation, expulsion, or suspension will also receive the same penalty.

The actual cost of damages to college property is to be paid by students responsible for such damages.

There will be a penalty of $2.00 per check given to the College and returned unpaid by the bank on which it is drawn.

NOTICE ON HOUSING

All single men and women students residing off campus must live in a home where there is an approved lady or house mother. This ruling is intended to mean that a mature and respectful person as approved by the Dean of Women or the Director of Housing must reside in the same building or general area that the students occupy. This ruling does not apply to married students living alone in apartments or houses, or to single men and women living in private homes that have been approved.

POLICIES REGARDING AUTOMOBILES

No freshman student at East Carolina College is permitted to have and/or to operate an automobile on the East Carolina College campus or in the Greenville area.

No student who has less than a "C" average or who is on disciplinary probation at East Carolina College is permitted to have and/or to operate an automobile on the East Carolina College campus or in the Greenville area. There are two exceptions to this regulation: (1) Those students who are considered commuters in that they reside with their parents or guardians outside of the city of Greenville and travel to and from the East Carolina College campus. (2) Those students requiring special exception may operate an automobile on approval of a committee composed of the Dean of Student Affairs, Dean of Men, Dean of Women, and the Director of Housing.

PROCEDURE FOR SCHEDULING SOCIAL FUNCTIONS

An organization which plans to have a social gathering should observe the following procedure and instructions:

1. Approval must be obtained from faculty advisor, or sponsor, and from the appropriate governing body—for example, Inter-Fraternity Council, Panhellenic Council, Student Government Association. Final approval must be obtained from the Dean of Student Affairs.
2. The place the event is to be held must be reserved for the date of the event; and, if required, a deposit paid. Campus facilities, in general, must be reserved through the Office of the Dean of Student Affairs.
3. Five approved chaperones from faculty (wives and husbands included) must be secured, and their names given to the Dean of Student Affairs at least five days prior to the event.
4. The Scheduled Event Form, in triplicate, must be turned in to the office of the Dean of Student Affairs five days in advance of the event.

College rules and regulations governing students and guests are applicable at all social functions. The following policies should be kept in mind:

1. The sponsoring organization will be held responsible and accountable for the behavior and activities of all people attending the event.
2. Failure to follow the above procedure and instructions will result in the postponement or cancellation of the event.
3. You are now a part of East Carolina College. Make the most of it.

Remember . . .

—In every social circle, good social conduct and etiquette help to make new friends and keep old ones. The same is true at ECC. Remember names, appear and be interested in that person next to you, and brush up on the finer points of social life.

—Cutting classes is a bad practice. You are paying for your college education—might as well get as much out of it as possible. The College has one of the finest faculties in the country, but your professors cannot teach you anything if you do not go to class.

—Rain, rain, rain (and we're not exaggerating)! With an annual rainfall of 49 inches, it is understandable that an essential for East Carolina College life is a good supply of rainwear.

—Always keep your identification card with you. Not only will it serve as an admission ticket to various campus functions, but it can be used for check cashing and other needs for identification.

—Use the many educational and recreational facilities available to you. Doing this, you can make the most of your stay at East Carolina College.

—Freshmen who do not have special permission cannot have or operate a car on the campus or in the Greenville area. Neither can upperclassmen who have less than a "C" average.

—This handbook could not possibly contain all there is to East Carolina life. However, you will find it an invaluable source of reference and orientation. Keep it and use it during your stay at East Carolina College.

Graduation—the end of one voyage and the beginning of another. From this day forward, the knowledge gained from college experience will serve as the helm of your travels on the "Sea of Life." Keep a firm hand on the helm and use the past as a guide post to your future.

Editor's Epitaph

Take my word for it—One's own epitaph is certainly no easy chore. It is here that one must seek to undo the wrongs, do the things that must be done, and give credit to oneself whenever possible.

Undo the wrongs—Certainly a tribute to a talented, industrious, and loyal staff is in order after those months of brow-beating and threats made in an attempt to get the job done. Eleanor Poole, Nancy Roberts, Harlan McCaskill, Sandra Waddill, Becky Willis, Gladys Capel, and Gayle Strickland are well-deserving of these tributes.

Do the things that must be done—Of course, there are always those, other than the staff, to whom an editor is indebted. To Lee H. Blackwell for constructive criticism and editorial opinions; to Dean Ruth White for indispensable aid; to Junius D. Grimes, Sue Ellen Hunsucker, and Walter C. Faulkner for editorial aid and moral support; to Fred Robertson, Gilbert Windham, Rufus Freeman, Joe Waldrop, Vaughn Gwyn, and Photo Arts Studio for photography; to the other three College publications for various odds and ends essential in putting our publication to press; and to Dr. James H. Tucker and the Publications Board for giving me this opportunity, I must show my appreciation. There is one person not yet mentioned. However, without her encouragement, her willingness to help, and the countless hours she spent on the publication, I might never have made it through the months from January to August. To our advisor, Miss Janice G. Hardison, goes a "thank you" as big and meaningful as they make them.

Give credit to oneself whenever possible—It is here that I am to "toot my own horn." However, it is the entire staff and our advisor who are deserving of any credit. This has been our idea of a publication which serves simultaneously as a "Frosh Bible" and "Campus Encyclopedia." If you like it, have found it attractive, and enjoyed using it, then these are the people, not the editor alone, who are deserving of your praise.
